

Brand-Name Drugs and their Generic Equivalents

Rev. July 2008

Choosing generics is an excellent way to save money! With generic drugs, you get the same quality as brand-name drugs at a lower cost. And many people find generics are a good choice for them. In fact, nearly 63% of prescriptions are now filled with generic drugs.

Generic drugs contain the same active ingredients as their brand-name counterparts, but they are not manufactured under a brand name or trademark. The color and shape of a generic drug may be different from the brand drug, but the active ingredients are the same for both. Best of all, generic drugs must meet the same Food and Drug Administration (FDA) standards as brand-name drugs.

Below is a list of brand-name drugs that have generic equivalents. If you are taking a brand-name drug on this list, ask your doctor if the generic equivalent is right for you!
